CITY CANDIDATES.

Who Have Piled Cortis

Beside the regularly nominated citisens' and people's party tickets covering the madidates for mayor and aldermen, the following persons have, up to date, field sertificates of nomination with the city stork: For police magistrate, J. A. Rethrell, Dr. A. Hardimbrook and H. H. Mayhew. For the office of city clerk and attorney, T. O'Leary, C. M. Sawyer and J. C. English. For city treasurer the name of John A. Delury appears.

The law provides that all nominations must be filed with the city clerk not more than 20 days or less than three days before an election, so there is still time for other candidates to appear in the field.

The friends of W. S. Shaw thought that gentleman would become a candidate for city attorney, but he stated yesterday that such was not the ease, and that he would not accept the office.

The general feeling among politicians is that the election of the citisens' ticket is already a foregone conclusion, and that the exciting contest will be on the offices of police magistrate and city attorney, it being generally conceded that Mr. Delury will succeed himself in the office of city treasurer without any opposition.

ANACONDA PARK.

ANACONDA PARK.

Popular Pleasure Recort to E

Opened Sees.

The Anaconda park, one of the most beautiful and popular pleasure resorts in Montana, will be under the management of Hon. John R. Walkup this season and will be made more popular and more beautiful than ever before. Mr. Walkup is now engaged in refitting, repairing and renovating the club reoms and pavillions and many important improvements are beinggmade. A gang of men are engaged beautifying the grounds and removing the rubbish accumulated during the storms and floods of the past winter. When the blossoms of spring return again the Anaconda park will be a pleasure paradise.

Thousands of people from neighboring cities last year visited Ansoonda park and enjoyed its sylvan beauties. It was a good advertisement for this city; this year, it is the plans of the management to make it more than ever popular and Mr. Walkup is just the man to do it.

REGISTRATION BY WARDS.

Three Wards Completed, Showing a List of 978 Names. Three wards Completed, thewing a List of 978 Names.

The registration list is now being copied into ward lists. So far three wards have been thus revised, showing that 370 citizens registered from the First ward, 332 names appear from the Second ward and 376 from the Third, making a total for the three wards of 978 voters. By deducting this number from the total number registered, 1,265, a tolerable close estimate of those registered in the Fourth ward can be made, making the same 288. It will not, however, quite reach this figure, owing to the connection of the list, which in two instances already found it proved men's names had been entered twice on the register. It is likely, however, that the mistake will not have occurred on more than these two occasions.

Registration is somewhat different from voting, for it does not pay to register more than once, but whether it pays to vote oftener is a question left to the individual citizen and the criminal courts.

"Ole Olson" at the Opera House.
Ole Olson was at the old Seattle opera house last night, and he didn't feel at all lonely, for every chair and available space in the building was occupied, and the continued applause that went forth was evidence that Ole was in the midst of admiring and appreciative friends. The play is a farce comedy familiar to all Seattle theater-goers, but the specialties form the greater attraction. James T. McAlpine took the part of Ole and he has the Swedish dialect to perfection. He is a sweet singer and graceful dancer, winning much applause by his clever acting and yodling song. "Ole Olson" at the Opera House.

Dollie Foster McAlpine, the soubrette who takes the part of Genie Dimple, caught the house with her sweet singing and nimble feet. Louise Arnot as Mrs. Bridget O'Flanigan, made quite a hit, while her dancing was well received. In the Eastern states she is favorably known, having made a reputation as 'Leah, the Forsaken,' in which she played the title role for several seasons, as well as assumed leading roles in a large repertoire of plays. The Swedish female quartette, imported direct from Stockholm, is possibly the best that ever sang in the city. The members have all sweet voices and sing their national airs very melodiously. They just carried the audience away, and the applause would not subside until after five encores had been responded to. R. C. Chamberlin and John W. Lince used their voices to good advantage. The rest of the company is made up of capable people.—Seattle Telegraph.

The I. O. O. F. Ball.

The I. O. O. F. Ball.

The masquerade ball given last night at French hall by the Independent Order of Odd Fellows was a pronounced success. Something over 100 tickets were taken at the door, insuring the attendance of that number of couples.

The costume of every nationality was represented, comprising Germans more German than any frequenters of Unterdem Linden, Englishmen whose brothers walking the Strand or Hyde Park would not recognize, Irishmen that Sackville street would not own, and a host of other foreigners. Dark eyed ladies, halling evidently from Spain, and other sunny climes, danced with horned demons, while faries danced with clowns. It was while faries danced with horned demons, while faries danced with clowns. It was a very pretty sight and when the hour for unmasking came at 11:15, many were the surprises as those who were strangers before recognised old friends. The dance was kept up until the early hours of the morning.

SAYS SHE DIDN'T.

PLATTERUNG, N. Y., March 30.—Mrs. Dr. Barlow of Brooklyn, who it is convently reported, sloped from Williamsburgh with Dr. C. H. Glies of Philadelphia, arrived in this village from Montreal this morning, and is registered at the Cumberland. Mrs. Barlow denies the elopement story, and says that she left home on account of the cruelty of her husband and a threat made by him a short time ago to incorrest ate her in an incane saylum.

She admits having soon Dr. Giles in Montreal, but says that, having been friends since childhood, she called upon him at his hotel on a matter of business, and that there have been no improper selations between them. She will remain here until she hears from he Philadelphia lawyer, to whom she has written for advice.

The Ealer's Telephone.

Greatly to the disgust of the various government officials at Berlin, Emperer William has recently developed a predilection for the use of the telephone, which, somehow or other, had escaped his attention until a short time ago. Instruments have now been placed in his library and working room, us well as in a number of other of the imperial apartments, and he is now all day long engaged, says the Marquise de Fontenoy, in ringing up one government official or another, or else talking with his friends and courtiers over the wire. He seems to find the same pleasure in calling up the various government departments over the telephone as he does in alarming the various garrisons at night time, being evidently under the impression that by so doing he keeps the officials strictly attentive to their duties, and convinced, that if not the eye, at any rate the ear of the emperor is on the qui vive concerning them. Although it may flatter the pride of the telephone people at Berlin to have the emperor among the subscribers and users of the system, yet it cannot be denied that he gives them far more trouble than any other subscriber on the banks of the Spree. For when he telephones to any of the government departments or to dignitaries or officials of high rank the operators at the central office are under the structest orders to abstain from listening to the conversation, and anyone caught disobeying in this particular is subject not only to dismissal but to unpleasantness on the part of the police. When the emperor rings anybody up, he does not announce his identity, taking it for granted that the tones of his voice are sufficiently well known. It has been noted, however, that he commences all his conversations over the wire with the word "I," and the verb "order," either in the past or the present tense, almost invariably follows. This is quiet sufficient to show who is talking.
